ASG GROUP ENTERS THREE YEAR CONTRACT WITH THE NATIONAL HEAVY VEHICLE REGULATOR (NHVR)

ASG Group, Australia's genuine alternative to the global digital transformation players, announced today that it has been selected by the National Heavy Vehicle Regulator (NHVR) to provide comprehensive infrastructure and managed application services.

The new contract will run for an initial period of three years, with options to extend for up to seven years, and ASG will create 22 new roles to help support the NHVR's borderless approach to regulatory services and administration.

The Chief Executive Officer of ASG Group, Dean Langenbach, said: "We are delighted to have been selected by the NHVR as the preferred partner to manage their infrastructure and managed application services."

"The NHVR's relationship with ASG Group is built on our mutual commitment to transparency, and we are confident that our partnership with ASG will help us deliver for all our stakeholders."

Chief Executive Officer of NHVR, Sal Petrocitto, said the contract will expand the organisation's national technology footprint, to achieve better safety, efficiency and productivity outcomes for industry.

"We look forward to working with ASG as we continue to deliver consistent and streamlined regulatory services and support our growing workforce."

ASG has extensive experience working with public sector agencies in Queensland and Western Australia, and the company employs more than 2,000 staff nationally and has offices in seven cities across Australia and Asia.
